

Judgmental

Never mind what you thought about me yesterday.

Now that you know me make an accurate display.

Forget about what they told you last week.

Now that you know me tell me what you think.

Can you not see there is more here than my face?

Choose to see past it, I have felt so disgraced.

Can you not tell there is more than you to me?

Choose to set me loose or I will just run free.

Never mind what you think now.

I have made it on my own somehow.

Forget about what they told you, it is not me.

How can you think that they really see?

Because you do not know what you want by now,

that does not mean I have to stick around.

If you cannot choose to let this be,
then I will leave and finally be free.

By: Natalie A. Thornhill

Dedicated to Adria Turley.