

Replacements

Exhaustion replaces my every move.
I lost the things so hard to lose.
I am all alone with people around.
If I fall will i hit the ground?
Fetch me, catch me, let me go.
we went so fast, you are forgotten slow.
Dull and boring I must have been.
You have replaced me now with them.
Exhaustion replaces my every care.
I talk to you though you are not there.
When these people go I make believe,
they had a care and did not leave.
kiss me, ditch me, make me cry.
You got my heart with a simple lie.
Exhaustion replaces my everything.
I listen to these voices sing.
They are in my head, not to view.
You will stare at me and what I do.
Tease me, please me, say what I want.
The downside is this evil haunt.
Exhaustion replaces my own mind.
Realistic world lost to my mind.
I fell the things that are not there.
Hold my hands, my lips, my hair.
Comfort me in times alone.
Talk to me on an unplugged phone.
I have lost my mind to my own dreams.
Maybe now I will decide to scream.

By: Natalie A. Thornhill

Dedicated to Josh Spearow.

